January 2012

Recently at the Meadowood Condos, there was a water claim that resulted in substantial damage to one of the buildings. As part of the repairs that were done, the HOA was required to test the building for asbestos. The results of the asbestos test were positive and the Association had to take extra precautions when doing the reconstruction. Before any repairs are made to the inside and outside of all units, unit owners are required to test for asbestos and do all necessary requirements as outlined through state statute in regards to asbestos mediation.
